FIRE DESTROYS McCANN HOME IN NEW LENOX

Late Wednesday afternoon fire supposed to have been caused by defective wiring completely destroyed the six room frame home of Lewis McCann located in the north McIntosh subdivision off Francis road.

Mr. and Mrs. McCann were at home when they discovered the fire raging in the attic, starting down one wall. Neighbors were quickly gathered to help fight the flames and telephone calls were made to the village for additional aid. As there is no fire fighting apparatus in New Lenox and surrounding sections, a bucket brigade was formed and water was supplied by hand pumps, but the bucket brigade seeing it was hopeless to try to save the doomed building, turned their efforts to preventing the blaze from spreading to other homes in the vicinity.

Because of the rapidity with which the flames spread very little of the home furnishings were saved.

Four children were at school at the time of the fire. The family spent the night at the home of neighbors.

The loss is estimated at $2,000 fully covered by insurance. Mr. McCann who is employed as a structural engineer in Chicago plans to rebuild the home in the spring.

Rep. Warren Wood Announces He Is In Political Race

Warren L. Wood of Joliet announced today that he intends to seek nomination on the Republican primary ticket for re-election to the office of Representative in the General Assembly from the 41st Senatorial District.

Mr. Wood has served two terms as Representative from this district and has established a reputation of dependability both locally and statewide in party circles and among groups affected by state legislation. His voting record has been approved and endorsements issued by organizations representing agricultural, labor, school, and insurance groups. He has been assigned to twelve committees during the two sessions and has personally sponsored the enactment of several laws needed and requested by his constituents.

Representative Wood pointed out that an increase of ten Republican members in the House of Representatives will split control of the Illinois legislature with a Democratic majority in the Senate and a Republican majority in the House. "That would create a healthy set of checks and balances that would benefit government in this state," he said. He anticipates an opportunity to concentrate on highway safety legislation and revision of tax-revenue and school laws during the coming session.

Word was received late yesterday afternoon (Thursday) that Lasel Graybeal Jr., 14 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Lasel Graybeal, Sr., former New Lenox residents, was killed in an auto accident in Hammond, Indiana the same afternoon.

FATALISM NATIONAL CALAMITY SAYS DR. MAIER

A fatalistic philosophy which denies, ignores, or questions God, His existence and His power is responsible for much of today's unrelieved sorrow, cynicism and despair, Dr. Walter A. Maier said today in his coast-to-coast Lutheran Hour broadcast.

"If the impulses of life are only chemical reactions, if the emotions and personalities are controlled by glands and glandocrats, if mother-love may be reduced to a chemical equation of magnesium, calcium and prolactin, then there can be no sustaining strength for life and no comfort for its multiplied problems," Dr. Maier asserted. He laid the blame or much of the prevalent spiritual and mental distress to the doors of modernistic churches whose spokesmen have "lost their role as comforters through Christ and become interpreters of the news, disseminators of the poorish philosophies, reviewers of questionable books."

Certain churches, Dr. Maier added are committing the "capital crime" of neglecting the earnest and systematic ministrations to the poor while saluting to the rich. "This neglect of the discouraged masses was repudiated by the public ministry of Jesus Christ and His divine love for the oppressed classes, and history tells us that whenever the churches are allied with wealth to the detriment of the ever-lasting poor, they have sealed their own doom and often precipitated national upheaval.

"It is only in Christ that the mystery of human suffering can be solved. Our age and our country may be witnessing the prelude to international disaster, but with faith in the pardoning and purifying love of God through Christ, we can have assurance positive of the constructive remedial purpose in every act of divine providence."

Frankfort Buys New Fire Truck

Frankfort has purchased a new fire truck from the American La France Co., at Elmira, New York. The truck has a booster tank and a 500 gallon capacity pump. The job is something new for this section, being equipped with a cab. This is the first American La France truck of this style in use in Illinois. The new outfit costs $7355.

The truck will be shipped to Chicago from New York and will be delivered to Frankfort sometime in April.

An open meeting will be held next Thursday night at 8 p. m., at the Frankfort village hall and all those who have made pledges for the cost of the new truck have been invited to attend. Anyone desiring to make a pledge can still do so. Thus far $3300 have been pledged.

The fire truck committee will also make a detailed report of its various inspections of fire trucks. The committee covered 2500 miles in visiting various cities to look over fire fighting apparatus.

unusual feature is labeled the "Wrestle Royal" and originated in the southern rings of our country. A "Wrestle Royal" consists of packing an entire evening's outstanding wrestling into a single bout and is composed of five athletes instead of the usual two.

The thrills that are revealed in this type of a contest cannot be described, as five men in constant action in the same ring will keep the spectators continually on their feet.

For this special feature Shaughnessy is attempting to sign the most outstanding names in the mat world and some of the tentative names are: Al Williams, who is at present touring the south; Rudy Kay, Jack Conley, Gorrilla Grubmyer, Bad Boy Brown, Jack Kogut, and several others.

The athletes that are being interviewed by Shaughnessy are those that have made a name for themselves as rough, tough, and fast wrestlers.

With five men of this type in the same ring at the same time, should provide enough thrills for even the most ardent wrestling fan.

The prestige gained by the athlete emerging from such a gruelling bout is an attraction to the notables of the grappling world, as a win is recorded against four opponents in a single contest.

Joyce heard him but her attention was riveted on something else. The bear-like apparition she had mistaken for Blackadder had undergone a strange transformation. Duffle bag and furs discarded, the slender figure of a young man in riding togs had emerged and was making a dash for the bridge. Joyce gasped, shaken by an insane desire to laugh, but the puffs of dust thrown up by bullets to the right and left of his flying feet quickly sobered her. She scrambled down the spiral stairway, rushed to the outer zaguan and ordered its heavy bar lifted.

None too soon, for as it slammed shut behind the fugitive several spent bullets buried themselves in its solid timbers. He was a young man, at the moment too breathless to speak, but his gray eyes were dancing and even his mussed dark hair gave an illusion of merriment.

"So it's you," said Joyce slowly, trying to measure the meaning and consequences of his presence.

"Yes," gasped Dirk, "and it's you too. Are—are you all right?"

"Yes, thank you," said Joyce unsmilingly.

"You're sure?" he persisted, "I mean quite, quite all right?" He flushed at her frown. "Nothing's happened?"

"Several things have happened," said Joyce dryly. "I hardly know what to do with you, Mr. Van Suttart."

"Why?" he asked flippantly. "Is the house crowded?"

"Fairly," she answered, her cheeks coloring. "Unfortunately," she added gravely, "we already have more than a full complement of children."

He was confused, conscious he was being shamed, yet wondering why. He had felt genuine ardor at setting out to make what Arnaldo termed a sentimental gesture. He had come to rescue her from the clutches of Dorado; she had rescued him.

"It appears I'm not welcome. Are you suggesting I get out?"

"That's the trouble," she said, frowning. "I can't ask you to go because you couldn't leave if you tried."

"Oh, yes I can," said Dirk; "I'll show you."

He turned quickly, dropped one end of the bar on the great gate, dragged it open only a foot and slipped through. His cheeks burned with anger. He knew she was right, knew it better than she. There was more than the combination of Dorado and the wrecked roadster to keep him from leaving. His job—the job so carelessly tossed him and so blithely taken on! He hadn't even nicked it; all he had done was to stand around while it swelled from a toy balloon into a blimp. But he was here and so was the job; consequently here was where he would have to stay. Joyce dashed after him.

"Don't be a fool," she protested angrily. "This isn't the time or the place to show off."

Dirk stopped and turned on her. "Go back," he ordered. "I'm not trying to show off and I'm not a child. I admit you're right on the rest of it. You can't throw me out and since my car is junk, thanks to your sharpshooters, I can't possibly get away."

"Then what are you doing?" asked Joyce, bewildered. "Why are we out here?"

"I'm going to fetch my things," said Dirk sullenly, "but your being out here is just a piece of nonsense."

Abruptly Joyce became aware of silence. She looked up and around. Far to the east she caught sight of the pillar of dust, this time moving away. She led the way toward the bridge.

"I've been in lots of countries," Dirk grumbled as they walked along, "but this is the first where everybody shoots before they ask you who you are. By the way, did you know mine isn't the only car parked the other side of the glorified ditch?"

To her amazement she heard herself say: "No. Where?"

Why? Why had that lie sprung ready-made to her lips? Her brain had had nothing to do with it; it hadn't had time. Now she paused in her stride, almost brought to a halt by memory of Pancho's flivver. She had forgotten about it. So there had been a way, after all, to send Van Suttart packing.

They retrieved Dirk's baggage and presently returned laden with duffle bag, rifle, coonskin coat, cap and gloves. Joyce watched Van Suttart with a curious expression as he replaced the bar on the great gate and then that of the zaguan. Reluctantly she led the way across the court and into the patio. He paused on its threshold and drew a long whistling breath.

Luz came hurrying toward them, her dark eyes hard and questioning. Joyce gave her a rapid order. "You'll have to talk faster than that for me to miss it," said Dirk. "You told her to give me a room as far away from yours as possible."

"Yes, and you'll find it's about a quarter of a mile," said Joyce sharply. She was angry—no longer at him but at herself. Why had she done this thing—admitted an enemy when she could have let him go. She saw Maxie approaching. Hadn't he warned her? "Since we ourselves are our only friends who ever comes from without must be a foe."

"Who's the poor devil of a blind man?" asked Dirk, cutting in on her thoughts.

"It's Senor Maximiliano, the superintendent," explained Joyce. "Maxie, let me introduce Mr. Dirk Van Suttart, second secretary of the American embassy."

Don Jorge threw up his head as he held out his hand gropingly. "Ah, my apologies."

"What for?" asked Dirk.

"It was by my order you happened to be greeted with bullets."

Dirk was led around two sides of the balcony and then through a maze of corridors to a room whose single window looked down upon the walled enclosure of an abandoned threshing floor. It was comfortable rather than luxurious.

He shaved and washed but did not change, then he found his way back to the balcony.

It was no place for a loafer. Hugging the rail he slipped down the stairs, intending to embark on a tour of discovery. As he passed the half-open door of what had once been Joyce's playroom he heard a low whinny. He entered and a moment later was passing knowing fingers over the heads, across the withers and down the legs of as fine a pair of hunters as he had ever handled. Where there were such horses there must be gear. He went out and walked along slowly, trusting his nose more than his eyes.

No sooner did he emerge from the inner patio than the smell of leather led him to the tack room, and what a tack room! Harness, bridles, spare bits and stirrups; saddles of every description, hand-made, home-made and imported. Two English ones promptly caught his eye. He lifted their flaps, flexed the stirrup leathers and groaned.

A methodical search unearthed a half gallon of neat's-foot oil and an unopened tin of saddle soap. With a sigh of satisfaction he threw off his jacket, rolled up his sleeves and went to work. Oblivious of the passing hours he remained unaware of Joyce's approach. She stood watching him with unbelieving eyes. Here was no coxcomb but an expert who knew exactly what he was about.

"I'm sorry I called you names."

"Eh? Oh, it's you. When?"

"You know; that first day at the chancellery."

"That was a long time ago," he said with a shake of his head as if to wake himself up. "You've certainly been stepping since then."

"It does seem long," admitted Joyce, "but it's only a week. I'm curious. How did you get here and why did you come?"

"Official business," said Dirk. "Instructions."

"What instructions?"

He dragged a flimsy from his hip pocket, unfolded it and studied the penciled interlinings with a frown. "I can't read it all because it's marked confidential, but it says I'm instructed to locate you with all possible dispatch, show every attention including provision of funds and guard without annoying you."

While he spoke Joyce had drawn near. With a sure movement, a pull rather than a snatch, she possessed herself of the paper and stepped back into the sunlight where she could read it at her ease. "So," she exclaimed, "I thought so! Prospective stepfather! What business is it of his? Why should he be giving you instructions?"

"Oh, not Mr. Blackadder. The Department of State."

"That's worse," said Joyce, her eyes flaring. "On what grounds?"

Dirk thought desperately but fast. What was the club Arnaldo had used on Margarida? He remembered. "On the grounds you're a minor."

Joyce's eyes traveled over him thoughtfully. "I came to tell you lunch is ready," she said at last. "While we're eating I'll decide whether to give you the run of the place on parole or have you locked up."

Neither of them smiled. Her sincerity was so evident that what she said fell naturally on his ears and was accepted at face value.

Lunch was not served in the formal dining room but in a much smaller apartment. Dirk sat on Joyce's right, Don Jorge Maximiliano on her left and they were served by a barefooted procession of servants equal in number to the variety of dishes. One forgot Don Jorge was blind, so neatly did he handle himself. He talked in uncertain but precise English with an Oxford accent, inquiring what posts Dirk had occupied and apparently trying to project himself backward into happy and distant scenes.

Silence fell. Dirk, reminded of the hunters, asked about them.

"The last of a noble strain," said Don Jorge. "Dorado kept them close at hand, but as things turned out not quite close enough. He alone rode them, a daily profanation."

Dirk turned to Joyce. "Do you mind if I tend to them? They need grooming."

"I'd love to have them looked after," said Joyce, "but what about your parole?"

"You have it. I give you my word I won't try to escape until you say I can go—and perhaps not then."

"Will you teach me to ride?" she bargained.

"Certainly." He spoke with confidence. "I'll be ready to give you your first lesson in an hour."

She rose from the table. "I'm not sure I can make it, but I'll try. We dine in this room at half past seven."

On his own responsibility he moved the hunters into two box stalls adjoining the tack room. One after the other he carried and groomed them until their hides shone. They nudged him violently more than once, expressing gratitude and hope. Dirk examined their feet; they had been freshly shod. As a finishing touch he oiled their hoofs and then had to make up his mind which he would saddle first. Among the campesinos about the stalls was Tobalito, a retainer. Dirk addressed him.

"What are their names?" he asked.

"The bay is Tronido and the sorrel they call Rayo."

"Thunder and Thunderbolt," translated Dirk.

Every bridle in the tack room was murderously equipped and it took some time to discover a couple of discarded snaffle bits, polish and substitute them. Dirk undertook to ride the bay first. He was prepared for trouble but somewhat to his disappointment, certainly to that of the crowd, there were no pyrotechnics. The animal recognized a master and his only show of insubordination was a quivering sidling toward the outer gate and freedom. Dirk walked, trotted and finally cantered him on a reach where the cobbles were bedded in chaff. He put his mate through the same meager exercise and found him equally amenable and spirited; nevertheless when Joyce appeared upon the scene there were no hunters in sight. In their place, ready saddled with the same gear, stood two rattail country ponies.

"What's the idea?" she asked, flushing angrily.

"Now don't be cross, please," begged Dirk. "You wouldn't expect to play a concerto at your first music lesson, would you?" He looked her up and down admiringly. "If you don't ride, how do you happen to have the jodhpurs?"

"I bought them as soon as I knew I was coming to Mexico," said Joyce. "You notice they haven't been worn."

"We'll soon fix that," said Dirk and proceeded to hand out the ABCs of equitation.

His patience matched her impatience and finally conquered it through sheer endurance. He made her mount and dismount a dozen times—reins, stirrup, pommel, then spring. When she was all but exhausted they rode at a walk and finally at a trot. She looked longingly toward the zaguan.

"I wonder if it would be safe," she murmured, "just for a little way?" She spoke rapidly to Tobalito in Spanish. "Go ask Leonardo if there's any trouble in sight. We want to ride only as far as the bridge."

Tobalito departed at a run, presently emerged from the northeast bastion, waved his hand and proceeded to drop the bar on the zaguan. A moment later she and Dirk passed through the outer gate and immediately she put her pony into a canter. True to her word they rode only as far as the bridge and turned. The next instant she wondered what had happened. The scrawny pony between her knees had made for the open gate as though shot from a catapult. She did not go with him. She landed, all sitting, with a jar that shook every tooth in her head. While she was still seeing stars Dirk was on his knees at her side.

"Hurt?" he asked.

"Don't be silly," she exclaimed angrily. "Of course I'm hurt."

"Where?"

"None of your business," she answered, scrambling to her feet.

She stalked before him. In silence they reached the gate, passed through the courts and the patio. She disappeared and he was not to see her again until dinner time. Having bathed and dressed in his one lounge suit he entered the dining room with some trepidation, but his fears were groundless since no woman can change everything she has on without changing her mood. He stared at her as if once more he were discovering the unknown, so different did she look in a fresh summer frock like a splash of flowers. The meal finished, the three of them sat for an hour of lazy talk, since on any hacienda time ceases with the setting of the sun. When at last she rose Don Jorge lifted his face toward her.

"Shall I make the rounds, chica, or will you?"

"I'll do it," said Joyce.

"Perhaps you might show Mr. Van Suttart," said the blind man. "Since he is now our friend he could relieve us of the duty."

Joyce hesitated, her eyes downcast. "Very well. Mr. Van Suttart, will you come?"

Dirk followed her through tortuous passages, up a spiral stairway and out on the esplanade of the rectangular roof. At the four corners towered the bastions. Beneath their feet were flat tiles so thick and so deeply embedded they could have withstood a cannonade. As far as the eye could reach shimmered the pale gold of the prairie, broken only by the distant snowy pyre of the Nevado de Toluca. Above their heads arched the low heavens, dangling the lantern of the moon and pierced by the myriad dots of silvery stars. Beauty stopped them—stopped their breath.

They faced each other with a gasp. A moment hung between them—a moment they must not lose. It was something visible, that had shape, round, translucent like a bubble—and like a bubble it broke and was gone. Mind had triumphed over dreaming.

"Come along; we've got to visit the four towers and it's quite a walk."

Simple or Sophisticated?

A PRETTY girl is like a melody and her frock is the swing in it that makes you remember her—and never lets you forget. Sew-Your-Own puts that "remember me" ingredient into all frocks, from its simple all-occasion models to its more exclusive fashion frocks. You, Milady, have an exceptional opportunity today to choose an engaging frock from this taking trio. Just send for your pattern and Sew-Your-Own will do the rest—see you through every step to a happy, successful finish, or, in other words, to a thrilling frock fortified with much "Remember me."

Five Shipshape Pieces.

Start your day in an attractive morning frock if you would leave a bright all-day impression on the family. Sew-Your-Own suggests the new, young-looking dress at the left for creating a really lasting impression. It will impress you, too, for the five pieces fit together so effortlessly and produce such shipshape style that you'll be not only pleased but thrilled. Gingham, percale, or seersucker is the material suggested for this popular frock.

Exclusive Looking.

A beautifully styled frock that will lend a festive feeling and a note of glamour to every occasion is the smart new piece, above center. It is modern of line, gracious of detail, and flattering beyond belief. The new tucked skirt looks important, yes, even exclusive, but happily for you, Milady, it's as easy to sew as any you've done. Note the little button trim and youthful collar and cuffs to add that telling touch of good taste. Make a copy for now in satin or silk crepe.

Come-Get-Me Look.

Winter is here, but Spring is packaged up for an early delivery, which would behoove the fastidious young woman to now turn her gentle thoughts to the problem of what-to-wear. The slim-waisted model, above right, should set one straight, both in matters of thoughts and actions, for it has that come-and-get-me look that's so typical of the modern Sew-Your-Own. The "act" of sewing is most simplified in this little number, as the seven pieces and the cut-away diagram clearly illustrate. Make this frock in duplicate for your complete chic and resistance to clothes worries.

The Patterns.

Pattern 1431 is designed for sizes 36 to 52. Size 38 requires 4¾ yards of 35-inch material. The collar in contrast requires ½ of a yard.

Pattern 1436 is designed for sizes 12 to 20 (30 to 38 bust). Size 14 requires ¾ yards of 39-inch material, plus ¾ yard contrasting. With long sleeves ¾ yards are required.

Pattern 1435 is designed for sizes 12 to 20 (30 to 40 bust). Size 14 requires ¾ yards of 39-inch material, plus ¾ yard contrasting.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., Room 1020, 211 W. Wacker Drive, Chicago, Ill. Price of patterns, 15 cents (in coins) each.

Chinchilla Farmer Successfully Raises the Soft-Fleeced French Gray Rodents

Twenty-three years ago the world's original chinchilla farm, now valued at $1,750,000, was started at Inglewood, Calif., by M. F. Chapman, a mining engineer, who had Indian trappers capture eleven chinchillas up in the lofty Andes. There are now 1,108 of the soft-fleeced French gray toylike rodents, valued at $1,600 each, for breeding purposes. They are housed in fine-wired cages, with separate apartments for each family.

According to farm authorities, says a writer in the Detroit News, the chinchilla mates for life, with father and mother sharing responsibility for bringing up the children. They even take shifts in hovering their offspring. Baby chinchillas arrive in litters of one to four, two being the usual number. They are born with full coats of fur and eyes wide open.

A chinchilla's diet is very simple and inexpensive, its total annual food bill of corn, rolled oats and alfalfa hay being only $10. Every other day he gets a quarter-kernel of a walnut, but being a strict teetotaler he gulps a teaspoon of water every twenty-four hours.

Since once in the farm's history half the population was stolen, these shy little animals, which measure about ten inches in length, not counting their bushy tails, are now guarded by armed men and burglar alarms on each of their houses. There are few pelts on the market and prices vary from $10,000 to $30,000 for full-length chinchilla wraps. Consequently, most wearers must be content with collars or short jackets of this precious gray fur.

These rare animals are practically extinct in the Andes, where they were first appreciated by the Inca chieftains of Peru.

To the Patrons of the Schools of
Will County:
You probably are aware of the fact that the State now inspects the various school busses throughout Illinois in order to be sure that our children are given every protection in their transportation to and from school. I have a recent report from Mr. Louis Keeley, one of Will county's highway police, living at Plainfield. Mr. Keeley informs me that just recently the five Plainfield busses, the three at Elwood, two at Lockport, and the three at Peotone have all been inspected and found very satisfactory. Some recommendations were made to the owners and operators of these busses and in every instance these recommendations were adopted.

I am passing on this information so that you will know that your children are given all the protection possible under the laws of Illinois.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES
"Sacrament" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday,
January 9.
The Golden Text was, "The cup of blessing which we bless, is it not the communion of the blood of Christ? The bread which we break, is it not the communion of the body of Christ?" (1 Cor. 10:16).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Wherewithal shall a young man cleanse his way? By taking heed thereto according to thy word. With my whole heart have I sought thee; O let me not wander from thy commandments. Thy righteousness is an everlasting righteousness, and thy law is the truth. Great peace have they which love thy law; and nothing shall offend them" (Psalms 119:9, 10, 142, 165).
The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook,
"Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy:
"We know that a desire for holiness is requisite in order to gain holiness;
but if we desire holiness above all else, we shall sacrifice everything for it" (p. 11).

New Year Hopes

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN
National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

Now, as a tired old year ebbs outward and a fresh new year sweeps in, America, as is the custom at this season, takes inventory of her hopes.

It is an excellent time to do this—for the New Year's celebration expresses the hopeful spirit of youth; and America, above all nations, is a Land of Youth. In America, the vigor, the strength, the imagination, the faith and the courage of youth still persist as our dominating characteristics.

What America hopes is that in 1938 those qualities will be given room for action. What she hopes is that the fears and hobbles and leading-strings, borrowed along with many other odd devices from the tired old nations of Europe, may be cast aside, and that our people again may be permitted to face the future with their traditional initiative and faith.

What she asks is assurance that our distinctive American qualities and virtues may find expression, without discouragement from government or other sources.

For the American people have all the resources to make the year 1938, and those that follow, successful.

They have resources in lands, in minerals and in equipment, unequalled elsewhere on earth. They have unlimited reserves in skill and strength and intelligence. And, greatest of all, they have boundless faith in their personal competence and national destiny. Without such confidence they could not have created our great nation.

If these resources, material and spiritual, are permitted to be realized; if this faith receives opportunity for expression, nothing can stop America. If her people are only given reason to believe that her natural progress will not be interrupted by borrowed theories and inhibitions, America will plunge resolutely ahead.

MARLEY

MISS FRANCIS GILLETTE

TO STUDY OXFORD FINDINGS

The Brotherhood of Bethany classes of the Marley church school plan a series of combined meetings to study report of the recent Oxford conference on the church, state and society.

Earl Cutler will begin the series next Sunday morning with a summary of the findings of the conference regarding the church and the community. Four other leaders are being selected from the two groups to present the materials on other topics. The church and the nation, the church and education, the church and economics, and the church and the world of nations are other topics on which the published conclusions of the Oxford conference will be reviewed.

This conference, held in Oxford, England, last July, was participated in by almost one thousand leading ministers and laymen from one hundred denominations and forty-five different countries. The coming together of these representatives of many groups is considered the most important gathering of the kind in many centuries. All branches of the Christian church have shown interest in the findings and the trends of contemporary Christianity as revealed there.

It is expected that these joint meetings of the two adult classes of the Marley church school will continue for five successive Sundays. School opened in the Marley school after a three weeks vacation. The teacher, Mary Cerkhuff, recently returned from a trip thru the southern states.

The Threat of Foreign "Isms"

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN
National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

In many of the messages of encouragement issued with the New Year, appeared a recurrent note of serious concern.

It warned of the dark threat that the ambitions of fascist nations abroad have brought to the peace and the welfare of humanity.

By Americans, as well as by the people of every democratic nation on earth, that warning should be heeded. For the ultimate victim of these foreign philosophies of government—whether Fascism or Nazism or Communism—is always the average man and citizen.

Current history proves it.

War rages hideously today where such nations prevail, while the great democracies are at peace.

Standards of living are lower today among the people of the dictator nations than in the democracies.

Freedom of religion, of the press, and of speech; the advancement of science and of education—all suffer under dictatorships. In democracies they flourish.

That is because the democratic ideal—to which America has been dedicated since her birth as a nation—is the freedom, the well-being, the advancement of every citizen. In the dictator nations, the individual becomes a robot, to serve as cannon fodder in war, as a "producing unit" in peace, for the benefit, not of himself or of humanity, but of the men in power.

Under such conditions freedom, as we know it in America, cannot survive. Yet it was to find or win such freedom that the great majority of our ancestors migrated to and developed this nation. It was to defend it that they suffered the hardship and privations of the pioneer, the wounds and the deaths of battle.

If we fail to guard vigilantly against the threat of foreign isms—from whatever source—we betray the ideals which are so inextricably woven into our flag, our traditions, and our very lives.

Handsome Mr. Bumble Bee.

THAT somebody was Peter Rabbit. You see, it was this way: When Jimmy Skunk had said that if he wanted to find the storehouse of Busy Bee he wouldn't waste his time and break his neck by looking for it, but would ask some one who knew where it was to tell him, he put an idea into Peter Rabbit's head. Peter wanted to find that storehouse of Busy Bee. What for? Why, to tell Buster Bear, for Buster had said that he wanted some honey and Peter, like all the other little people who were afraid of Buster, wanted to find it for him so that he would be a friend.

Jimmy Skunk, who isn't afraid of Buster, and so didn't care anything about finding that storehouse of Busy Bee's, had made fun of all those who were looking for it, but he had given Peter just the idea he wanted and he could hardly wait for Jimmy to go on about his business, he was so anxious to try it.

"Of course," said Peter to himself, "if any one knows where Busy Bee's storehouse is it will be her cousin, Bumble Bee. Bumble is a pretty good friend of mine and perhaps he will tell me. Of course I won't tell him why I want to know, because if he knew that Buster Bear wanted to steal the honey he might

by Dr. George D. GreerCAN YOU JUDGE INTELLIGENCE AND CHARACTER FROM PHOTOGRAPHS?

WHEN an employer selects applicants on the basis of photographs, he is about as likely to get intelligent employees as he would if he closed his eyes and selected them by chance, according to studies made by Prof. Donald Laird of Colgate university. Dr. Laird took ten photographs of people whose intelligence ranged from very high to very low, and had a hundred people rate the ten pictures on the basis of intelligence shown in the pictures. The result showed that it is impossible to judge either intelligence or character by a photograph alone. I have tried similar experiments in my own university classes, with similar results. It is like trying to read character from the hand, or the shape of one's head.

not tell me. I'll just let him think that it is my natural curiosity."

So as soon as Jimmy had gone on about his business Peter started out to hunt for Bumble. "I'll be sure to find him where the brightest flowers are," thought Peter. So away he went across the beautiful Green Meadows looking for the brightest flowers. But there were so many of them it was hard work to tell which were the brightest. Peter sighed. It looked as if it would be more of a task to find Bumble than he thought it would be. But it would be worth a whole lot of trouble to find out where that storehouse of honey was and so win Buster Bear for a friend, and so Peter hurried, lipperty-lipperty-lip, from one bright group of flowers to another.

It would have been hard enough if he had nothing to do but watch out for Reddy and Granny Fox. He had to watch out for Old Man Coyote. He had to watch out for members of the Hawk family, who were very fond of dining on Rabbit. So, whenever Peter had to cross an open place to get from one group of flowers to another, he first had to sit up and look all over the Green Meadows to see that no danger was

MEN AND WOMEN AGREE ON FOODS

Seems to Be No Real Sex
Division on Tastes.

By EDITH M. BARBER

ARE foods that men like so very different from women's favorite foods? Actually, I don't think there is any real sex division when it comes to taste in food.

Perhaps women in general are fonder of sauces and thick salad dressings, but I have yet to find a woman who scorns the steak which many men choose as their favorite dish, or a man who will turn down a pudding with a rich sauce.

Women seem as a rule to like vegetables better than men. Men, however, are apt to be devoted to such vegetables as fried onions and baked potatoes, although I do know men who actually dislike onions. Not long ago just for amusement, I asked a number of men to tell their favorite dishes and this is the list:

Steak
French fried onions
Apple pie
Ham and eggs
Cheese cake
Chocolate cake
Sweet potatoes with marshmallows.

French Fried Onions.
1 cup flour
½ teaspoon salt
2 to 3 cups water
2 tablespoons salad oil
1 egg white
10 to 12 large onions
Mix and sift dry ingredients. Add water, beat smooth; add oil. Fold in stiffly beaten egg white. Slice the onion one-eighth inch thick. Separate into rings, reserve the small rings for other use. Soak in milk to cover one hour. Drain and dry, dip in batter and fry in deep oil about two minutes. Drain on soft paper.

Sweet Potatoes With Marshmallows.
5 sweet potatoes
Hot milk
Butter
Marshmallows
Seasoning
Cook the sweet potatoes until soft. Pare, press through the ricer, and add seasoning and hot milk, enough to make a soft consistency. Add a tablespoon of butter to each pint of potatoes and place in a greased baking dish. Cover with marshmallows and bake in a hot oven (500 degrees Fahrenheit) until brown.

Casserole of Chicken.
1 chicken (3 to 3½ pounds)
3 tablespoons butter
½ cup chopped celery
½ cup chopped carrots
2 tablespoons minced onion
1 cup cream

near, and then all around in the sky to see that no danger was likely to come from there. Then when he had scamped across the open place he had to do it all over again before he dared look for Bumble.

Two or three times bright-faced flowers whispered that Bumble had been there and had just gone. Then Peter hurried on more hopefully than ever. But always he was just too late. At last he grew discouraged and sat down to rest.

"Bumble is always around when he isn't wanted and never around when he is wanted," he grumbled.

HAVE you ever wanted to crown some one who is always reading aloud signs she sees along the road? "Hot dog wagon 200 feet ahead," she reads out jovially, as though it were a piece of news or a gem of wit. "Room with bath for only a dollar and a half," she goes on. "Swimming pool and cabins ten miles ahead. The Wee Bitty Inn, why not come in and have a wee bitty rest?"

It gets dreadfully monotonous. It's a wonder more drivers don't fall asleep at the wheel on account of riding with sign readers.

Having been both a reader and an anti-ourselves, we think there's only

Capture of Two Sharks

Proof of Right to Wed

Among many of the New Guinea coastal tribes it is compulsory for a native to capture at least two sharks unaided before he may marry. In most cases, says a writer in the New York Times, the sharks are caught in a very ingenious trap. The trap is merely a big float carved out of a long piece of soft wood. Through a hole in the center of the float there is fastened a length of strong, hand-woven cane rope, knotted at one end and tied in a running noose at the other.

Towing this curious contraption the bridegroom-to-be sets out in his tiny canoe. He takes along with him several dead fish, one of which is tied at the end of a long stick. With this he seeks to attract the shark toward the canoe. When the shark draws near the fisherman places his trap in the water with the noose hanging downward.

Then, using the strong-smelling fish as bait, he tempts the monster until, in order to secure the fish the shark thrusts its head through the cane noose. As it does so the noose tightens and the shark is caught. At once it plunges away in terror.

National Topics Interpreted
By WILLIAM BRUCKART
NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington.—It is a little early in the new year to become despondent.

"Bill's" Not Happy

I suppose, after the manner of a certain radio star, I ought to be happy about the whole thing. But I am not. The outlook is too gloomy. Developments of the last few weeks have combined to make me a pessimist of the first water. I hope I am wrong; yet, present conditions force the conclusion that this country faces a condition as serious as that through which it passed in 1932 and 1933. There is no reason evident to me why we should not face the facts, discouraging as they appear.

So, let us consider some of the things that have happened lately, and some that are happening these days. Only in that way, I believe, can we get a correct understanding of this new depression which a thousand government propagandists insist upon calling a "recession."

Four months ago, industry began to lay off men and women workers. There was no market for the goods they were manufacturing. The reduction in payrolls was necessary to avoid bankruptcy. Nobody can afford to pay workers if there is no work to do. Dismissal of workers continued in an ever-growing volume until on January 1, the great General Motors corporation laid off something like 60,000 men at one time and placed its remaining 200,000 workers on a four-day week. That action, while it appears sensational, was illustrative of what had been going on during the four months that I mentioned; it brought public attention and political attention to a focus, but it was sensational only because of the numbers. It made an impression that dismissal of a few or several hundred here and there had failed to make.

During this same period, prices were undergoing a natural and normal reaction. Some were up; some were down. Altogether, they were and are in a topsy-turvy condition.

Government business analysts smelled the mouse. They were watching all of the trends that were evident during those four months. Those officials in high places and charged with responsibility for national welfare were informed of what was in prospect. But government propaganda continued to show bright and smiling faces in the picture. It won't last, they were saying in the written and spoken words. It is a psychological condition, President Roosevelt said—and thereby made the same mistake that President Hoover made when he announced that prosperity was just around the corner in 1931. It is the same old corner and it is the same old prosperity, but apparently the Roosevelt administration is going to have just as much trouble finding either the corner or the prosperity as Mr. Hoover did.

To get back to the sequence of events: the time came when the responsible officials had to say something by way of admitting the existence of the depression "recession." Mr. Roosevelt, it will be recalled, went off on a fishing trip around December 1. He took with him the brilliant and able young Robert Jackson, of the Department of Justice. Now, Mr. Jackson's particular ability lies in the direction of breaking up trusts, monopolies, big business combinations. Those of us whose job it is to watch Washington, thought we foresaw the next move by the administration. We have it now in full flower—a great drive against all of those sinful big business interests who simply must be the folks responsible for the depression. Of course, it should be remembered at the same time that there must be a "goat" when politics gets balled up, and big business again is the "goat" of the administration.

In consequence of the crash in business, the collapse of the theories of the long-haired crew that seeks to remould America under the guise of New Deal plans, and the general running out of Democrats on the New Deal leadership, the country is now to be treated to another trust-busting drive comparable to that conducted by the late Theodore Roosevelt when he was President. Yes, big business can always be attacked, cajoled, threatened. It is a proper stunt, nearly always resorted to by politicians and others who find themselves locked within the meshes of their own fishnets. Big business is the red herring that the administration is trying to drag across the trail. It is because the administration is attempting to conceal its mistakes, and make people forget them instead of doing a constructive job that I find myself despondent in the early weeks of 1933.

The real tip-off to the drive on big business was in the form of a speech by Mr. Jackson who said by way of the radio that: "The only way to insure a reasonably steady well-being for the nation as a whole is for the government to act as an impartial overseer of our industrial progress, ready to call a halt at all times on monopolistic practices which threaten to throw our economy out of order."

That theory is basic with most of the New Dealers. America must be made responsive to the Washington government. It is that theory to which more and more business men, little as well as big, are objecting. They are fearful of it for the reason that they can not see how this administration or any that may follow will be "impartial" in overseeing industry. It is quite natural for a political group to be intent upon preserving itself in power, and that end never has been accomplished by impartiality.

But the New Dealers wish to avoid blame for the conditions now confronting the nation. Conveniently enough, there is no mention being made now of the tremendous pressure that was exerted through four of the last five years to bring about higher prices. Those prices now are held to be the result of monopoly, not the fault of the professors who were saying a few years ago when prices were moving higher that "we planned it that way." So political guns are turned on big business—but my guess is that little business will be hurt more than big business by the refusal of the Wallaces, the Ickes, the Oliphants, the Jerome Franks, the Corcorans and the Cohens to recognize that Hitler's style of business management must fail here as in Germany.

The frankest statement about the whole thing has come from Mr. Roosevelt himself. He declared recently that "over-extension of inventories" was responsible for the current depression. That is to say, producers and manufacturers, feeling that business was booming, produced or manufactured too much. They did not recognize that the better business we appeared to have in 1935 and 1936 was highly superficial. Nor were they aware that the Washington government would do in the way of controlling or burdening business of all kinds with new taxation and new restrictive legislation.

It was from those latter two things that a fear was bred and the factories and farms that were being worked full tilt because prices were going higher were left with an overstock. I think it can be fairly said also that few persons expected to see such encouragement from the administration for labor to flout the law and take over control of property as has happened. Whatever else may be said, however, the fact remains the theories constantly being advanced by one or another of Mr. Roosevelt's advisers have frightened millions of persons who still have a few dollars which they would like to put to work. On the whole, I am convinced those dollars will not be put to work unless and until there is assurance from Washington that sanity and not monkey-doodle schemes will be exercised in governmental dealings with the country's business. It is dishonest on the part of government, regardless of political party, to charge that business brings about depressions; any person with a grain of sense must know that no individual desires to throw away his own money or throw away a chance to make more.

President Roosevelt has taken a firm stand for a larger navy. His action deserves commendation. Conditions throughout the world are such that he would be foolish to disregard the necessity for a strong defense. It will cost money, of course, but preparedness has proved cheaper always than being thrown into war because no other nation is afraid of us.

I have an idea that Mr. Roosevelt will be attacked from a dozen different directions. So-called peace organizations will try to pin his ears back and make him say "uncle," but I have gained the impression that Mr. Roosevelt will adhere to his program. Certainly, nearly all students of international affairs agree that he is 100 per cent right.

In a letter to house leaders, Mr. Roosevelt suggested the necessity for construction of two battleships, two light cruisers, eight destroyers and six submarines during the fiscal year beginning next July 1. These craft are in addition to other naval construction already considered for the next fiscal year. It will take two or three years to build some of these boats. Planning and preliminary work ought to be started on them as soon as possible. Mr. Roosevelt believes the work ought to start right away—and after all I think most folks will agree that the President is in a better position than anyone else in the country to know what the dangers are.

Lesson for January 16

BEGINNING A LIFE OF SERVICE

LESSON TEXT.—Mark 1:14-28.
GOLDEN TEXT.—The time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand: repent ye, and believe the gospel.—Mark 1:15.
PRIMARY TOPIC.—Jesus' First Helpers.
JUNIOR TOPIC.—Why the Fishermen Followed Jesus.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC.—Serving Now.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC.—Adjusting Life to Service.

The public ministry of our Lord was not begun with any great fanfare of publicity. Leaving Judea where the entrenched forces of formal religion had joined the forces of sin and degradation in opposition to him, and which had brought about the imprisonment of John, our Lord appears in his home country, Galilee.

I. Preaching the Gospel (vv. 14, 15, 21, 22).

His first activity is worthy of careful note, for it is not exactly what one might expect in this Gospel of Mark, which we have already characterized as the Gospel of mighty deeds rather than of words. Jesus came to work miracles, and he did work them, and continues to do the miraculous even in our day. It is therefore significant that his first recorded work was that of preaching, his second that of calling and preparing fellow workers, and last of all the miraculous healing of the demoniac.

From a human viewpoint one would think that the opposite order would prevail. First let the Master do some mighty miracle to catch the attention of the people, then organize a great "party," and then preach. Much of the so-called evangelistic effort in our day follows that human formula and fails of lasting results. Observe the man who magnifies preaching and gives the Word of God pre-eminence, and you will see real spiritual accomplishments.

Jesus preached faith and repentance, or perhaps one should say repentance and faith (v. 15). They go together in our Lord's preaching. Let us follow his example.

We read in verse 2 that the hearers were astonished because he spoke with authority. They had been accustomed to hearing the lawyers dispute on the basis of the authority of the law, now the law-giver himself stood in their midst. He did not set aside the law, but he gave it an interpretation and direction which surprised them.

II. Calling Disciples (vv. 16-20).

The orderly development of any work calls for the choosing and training of associates. Moody is said to have observed that "it is a greater thing to put ten men to work than it is to do ten men's work." Our Lord was no mere human leader, but he desired and used fellow-workers and he committed to them the carrying on of his work after he departed.

God still calls men into his service. Would that grace might be given to each one to whom such a call may come to respond "straightway," as did the disciples. The writer has just read the letter of a heart-broken man who has refused to answer God's call for four long years, and now comes with a broken body which may hinder his usefulness for life. Such tragedies may be averted by prompt and willing obedience.

III. Healing the Demoniac (vv. 23-28).

Three things stand out in this story. The first is that the Son of God has power over the demons of Satan. Any effort to "fight the Devil" in our own power is foredoomed to failure. But in the name of Jesus Christ we may bid him depart from us. Thank God, it works!

The other thought is also of vital import. The demons recognized Jesus, they knew that he was "the Holy One of God" (v. 24), and they bore public testimony of that fact. And yet they were demons, the enemies of God. Saving faith in the Lord Jesus Christ is more than a knowledge of his claims, a pious repetition of his name even though it be done in public. Let us make sure that we have a living faith in the Son of God.

Our final observation is that our Lord did not permit the demons to testify concerning him. Christ and his church do not need the flattering words or the financial support of unbelievers. Every time we accept them we weaken our testimony and make ourselves ridiculous before the world. If unbelievers think well of Christ let them show their sincerity by seeking him as Saviour and Lord. Then both they and their gifts will be acceptable and to his glory.

Physical Handicaps
The failure to overcome our physical handicaps is only one of many indications that few of us ever discover ourselves.

Seeing Ourselves
We see time's furrows on another's brow; how few ourselves, in that just mirror, see!—Young.

Pleasures
A man that knows how to mix pleasures with business, is never entirely possessed by them.

Historic Hoaxes

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON
© Western Newspaper Union.

The Spider Farm

RALPH D. PAINE made a name for himself as a war correspondent in the Spanish-American war and the Boxer uprising, but it's more likely that his fame will endure because of a hoax which he perpetrated while he was a reporter for the Philadelphia Press in the 1890s. One day he turned in a story about a certain Pierre Grantaire, who lived out on the Lancaster pike and was making a fortune by raising and selling spiders that were trained to spin cobwebs over wine bottles, thus giving them the desired appearance of age.

According to his yarn, Mr. Grantaire sold thousands of these trained spiders every year, shipping them to customers in "little paper boxes, so many dozen to every crate." But he always kept his "queen spider," named Sara Bernhardt, who, when he tapped on her filament, ran up his finger for a fly, after which "the startling pet tripped back indoors with the booty." "Sara's" consort was "Emile Zola," a fearsome specimen of the "famed bird-hunting spiders of Surinam."

After the story was printed, hopeful investors began flooding the Press office with letters asking for M. Grantaire's address. More than that, other papers began reprinting the yarn under the head of "Scientific Notes" and "Nuggets of Fact." Years later this same yarn kept bobbing up in different places. As recently as last year a magazine featured the story under the title of "Webs for Sale" and an anonymous writer in the Atlantic Monthly's "Contributor's Club" repeated the hoary yarn, declaring that "my grandfather" kept the spider farm!

Death Warrant of a Witch

IF YOU are ever offered an opportunity to buy the "death warrant of a Salem witch, an original document—and a very rare item of early New England, dated 1692," don't invest, no matter how much of a "bargain" it is. Not even the fact that it is "one of the few papers containing the autograph of Indian King Phillip and especially fine autographs of Cotton Mather, Increase Mather, John Winthrop and Gov. William Phipps" should influence your decision.

You see, the first John Winthrop died in 1649, the second one died in 1676 and King Phillip was killed the same year, which would have made it difficult for them to be signing any kind of document in 1692. Usually there's a typewritten card with this "rare old document," saying that it "has been pronounced genuine by the Massachusetts Historical society" (or it may be the South Carolina Historical society), but that doesn't mean a thing, except that the not-so-clever forger who peddles such documents (he's always hard up and is willing to sacrifice his precious possession to get enough money to get back to his home in Texas or Maine or California) realizes that many people are rather vague in regard to dates in American history. So he tries to cash in on that ignorance.

Shakespeareana

ONE of the most famous of all forgers of historic documents was Samuel William Henry Ireland, son of an Eighteenth century admirer of the great Shakespeare. One day the boy brought to his father what he claimed to be an original version of "King Lear," a fragment from the original "Hamlet," and a letter from Queen Elizabeth inviting the Bard of Avon to tea. But most important of all was the manuscript of a hitherto unknown tragedy, "Vortigern and Rowena."

The elder Ireland, overjoyed at getting such treasures, didn't inquire too closely where the boy had obtained them. He exhibited them in his London house where they were examined by Samuel Johnson, Boswell and other notables who pronounced them genuine. Immediately the London theatrical managers began bidding for the privilege of producing the newly-discovered tragedy and the famous Richard Brinsley Sheridan of the Drury Lane theater captured the prize by paying Ireland 300 pounds in cash and a promise of 50 per cent of the profits on the first performance.

Then Edmund Malone, authority on Shakespeare, burst the bubble by proving that all the documents were fakes. But it was too late to prevent the first performance of the play with the famous Mrs. Siddons as the heroine, "Rowena." To make the best of a bad situation, the actors turned the play into a burlesque of Shakespeare which delighted its audience. Then the play was withdrawn and the younger Ireland ended the affair by confessing that he was the "author" of all these Shakespeare documents.

Difficult Scientific Name

Albizia julibrissis is the rather difficult scientific name of the large shrub or small tree that goes by several popular names—mimosa, acacia and silk tree. This tree is not the true mimosa. It is closely related to the acacias, and is a beauty both in and out of bloom.

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

WHETHER you line your new draperies or not will depend on how heavy the material is. It is important, however, that the top of draperies be stiffened when a French heading is used. A soft canvas which may be purchased in drapery departments is generally used for this purpose. From four to six inches is a good depth to cut the heading canvas. Turn the top of the curtain material over it and sew as at A.

Start to sew the plait about an inch down from the top of the drapery and sew it the depth of the stiffening, as shown here at B. Pinch this plait into three small plaits and, starting two inches down from the top, sew through as at C. Sew these plaits the depth of the stiffening, so that they appear as shown here at D. Now turn to the wrong side and sew a ring to the back of each plait as at E.

Every Homemaker should have a copy of Mrs. Spears' new book, SEWING. Forty-eight pages of step-by-step directions for making slipcovers and dressing tables; restoring and upholstering chairs, couches; making curtains for every type of room and purpose. Making lampshades, rugs, ottomans and other useful articles for the home. Readers wishing a copy should send name and address, enclosing 25 cents, to Mrs. Spears, 210 South Desplaines St., Chicago, Illinois.

AROUND THE HOUSE

Furniture Coverings.—Zipper fasteners on furniture coverings make the coverings easy to remove for laundering.

Growing House Plants.—When soil in which house plants are potted becomes more like clay than loam it may be lightened by adding sand to it. Plants grow best in this kind of soil.

Don't Burn the Cake.—Set an alarm clock to go off at the time when cakes, and roasts, are due to be finished. It can be heard all over the house and acts as a reminder to the busy housewife who, intent on another job, may have forgotten the time.

Unrolling Tape.—Scoring the sides of friction tape with an old razor blade, or sharp pocket knife will enable you to unroll it without tearing the edges.

Grouping Furniture.—Groupings of furniture, including pictures and lamps, should generally balance each other in height, width and effect of lightness or heaviness, housing experts say.

Non-Skid Clocks.—When an ornament or clock slips on a polished mantelpiece or sideboard, try cutting four small squares of felt from an old hat and sticking one to each corner of the base of the article. It doesn't show and it's quite "non-skid."

Prune Salad.—Cook some large prunes, one for each person. Stone and stuff with cream cheese which has been softened with a little milk. Let the stuffed prunes set for half an hour. Take one or two large lettuce leaves and arrange orange on the round and place on lettuce, and in the center of orange place a stuffed prune. Serve with mayonnaise dressing. on each plate. Cut a slice of Washing Walls.—When washing dirty painted walls with soapy water containing a cleaning powder, the job is made easier if a little flour is added to the water to make a paste. The paste will hold the mixture to the wall long enough for the powder to dissolve the dirt.

Sentinels of Health

Don't Neglect Them!

Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure. When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feet tired, nervous, all worn out.

Frequent, scanty or burning passages may be further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbances. The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. Use Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are endorsed the country over. Insist on Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.

Unemployment Registration

During the month of December, the number of persons contacting the Illinois State Employment Service was quite large, although the number who registered for the first time was comparatively small, 2336. At the present time 4206 persons are listed for employment at the Joliet office.

While there has been a large increase in unemployment throughout the country recently, the Illinois State Employment Service with the co-operation of employers in Will county managed to place 375 persons in private jobs during the month of December. Of this number 173 were men and 202 were women, bringing the total of private placements for the year 1937 to 6511, of whom 3507 were men and 3004 were women.

Valuable assistance in making this record possible was rendered by the newspapers and postmasters throughout Will county, who published lists of job openings in the papers and on bulletin boards, thereby reaching

TINLEY CLUB AT ENGLEWOOD

Nine members of the Tinley Park Women's club attended the Third District meeting held in the Englewood Masonic Temple with the Englewood Club as hostesses Monday.

Part of the morning program was under the direction of Mrs. John Kent, district chairman of Gardens, who spoke on "Flower Arrangements."

The garden chairman of each club in the district was invited to enter an exhibit of a flower arrangement with a definite purpose.

Mrs. Frank Baldwin, as chairman of the Tinley Park Women's club won fourth prize, with a table arrange or a wooden wedding anniversary. It was made of a wooden chopping bowl, wooden spoon and fork, cloths pins and rolling pins in the center of which was a lovely Acacia in a bed of ferns.

The under water bouquets for a mantel, took the first award; the second was an arrangement for a piano and the third, was flowers for the President's desk.

Mrs. Wallace B. Combs a member of the Englewood Club acted as one of the judges.
